Bad News That Is Good

—BY ARTHUR BRISBANE—

NEWS FROM SPAIN takes you back to Henry the Eighth of England and his many wives. Rome refused him a divorce that he particularly wanted and Henry seized the great wealth of the church and the religious orders in England, starting a new church, the Episcopalian, and persuading Charles the Fifth to protect Luther to spite the Pope.

Spain's constitutional committee [illegible] to expel all members of religious orders from Spain and seize their wealth. Increasing through the centuries, with gifts and legacies from the faithful, that wealth is great, sufficient to solve the financial problems of Spain. Largely in real estate, the property could not be taken out of Spain.

This news, combined with recent events in Mexico and Italy, may cause the church to consider as its principal investment property other than real estate.

Freedom from taxation and assessments makes land an ideal investment for all religions, but only in countries where property rights are respected. Spain's constitutional committee wishes a constitutional definition of Spain as a "Democratic republic." It is one thing to compose a definition, another to make it real.

THIS ENERGETIC Russian government, working and producing with marvelous energy born of revolutionary enthusiasm everything from tractors to candy, sell gasoline in South America at 11 cents a gallon and lumber at $20 a thousand feet.

Our government might wake up and get rid of the antediluvian Sherman act nuisance, with its silly insistence on full competition.

Russia has only one lumber, coal, sugar, gasoline, machinery or other concern, and it's always the Russian government.

With Deterding of the Dutch-English Shell company taking the business away from our old-fashioned oil gentlemen here and Russia taking the foreign gasoline business "where shall we land" Must we wait, like Little Miss Muffet until the Russian spider sits down beside us and scares us away from the world market?

SOFT COAL MEN want the federal government to control their business making them a public utility that government, as with railroads may compel the public to pay a profitable price.

And the coal men advance an ingenious idea. They would have the government buy from them surplus or unprofitable coal mines and shut them down.

A few stores, hotels, apartment houses office buildings and even newspapers would like to make the same arrangement.

PRESIDENT HOOVER wants to keep away from that ugly word "dole" and the public approves. The word is almost as disagreeable to the unemployed as to those that would be taxed to supply the dole money.

But seven millions are idle, and the number will increase unless industrial conditions change, and there are two words more unpleasant than "dole." One is "riot" and the other is one not even pronounced in America, because it makes us so jumpy.

President of Home Building and Savings Company Claimed.

WAS 33D DEGREE MASON

Had Been Ill for Some Time but Death Was Unexpected.

Death claimed Michael Waddell, 78, president of the Home Building Savings and Loan Co. and the only thirty-third degree Mason in Marion county, yesterday at 7:30 p. m., at his home at 605 east Center street.

Mr. Waddell had been away from his office for the last three weeks. His condition had not been favorable for some time, but death came quickly yesterday of a complication of diseases.

JAIL FARMER IN SHOOTING

Hardin County Officials Probe Death of Mrs. Myrtle Brown, 22.

WILL HOLD INQUEST

Husband of Dead Woman Claims Death Was Due to Accident.

Special to The Star

KENTON, Aug. 8—Webster A. Brown, 47, was held in jail here today while authorities investigated the fatal shooting yesterday of his 22-year-old wife, Myrtle. She was killed at her home near Ada while ironing dresses for her four children.

Brown told Coroner Floyd N. Elliott and Sheriff Morton Ansley that one of the barrels of the gun was discharged when a screen door struck the butt of the weapon as he entered the kitchen where his wife was ironing. He had just returned from hunting groundhog on his farm.

Post mortem examination late Friday showed that the shot struck Mrs. Brown in the back, severed the spine, penetarted the lungs and one shot passed through the body, Coroner Elliot said. An inquest will be held Monday morning by the coroner.

The body has been removed to Alger. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were married three years ago, and both were previously married. The four children have been brought to the home of the grandparents in Kenton. No arrangements for the funeral have been made.

GARY, Ind., Aug. 8—Edward Barnes, 27, was under arrest today in connection with the killing in Lima, O., of Earl Truesdale, 21, and his sweetheart, Thelma Woods May 29.

Barnes was recognized by the words "hard tack" tattooed on the knuckles of his left hand. A policeman saw the words, recognized him from a description and trailed him to his apartment where the arrest was made.

Police Chief Stanley Bucklind said that Mrs. E. H. Cheyeney, a deputy prosecutor of Lima, asked Gary authorities to watch for Barnes. The Lima authorities had information that Barnes would come to Gary, Bucklind said.

Bucklind refused to discuss why Barnes was apprehended. Barnes was held incommunicado.

DIRECTORS OF BANK ACCUSED IN COURT

Heads of N. Y. City Institution Are Sued for $60,000,000

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—Joseph A. Broderick, superintendent of banks, filed suit in supreme court against all the directors of the Bank of the United States for $60,000,000 charging misapplication of funds.

The papers in the action charge the defendants acted "in general disregard and violation of their duties and allowed the bank to be managed, conducted and operated in an improvident, careless and reckless manner."

The complaint also charges the directors approved and permitted the maintenance and operation of fictitious and false systems of bookkeeping and accounting, with the aim and purpose of concealing the true nature of the operations of the bank from the banking department.

The sum of $60,000,000 mentioned in the complaint, it was disclosed, represented broadly the estimated deficit caused by the alleged mismanagement of the Bank of the United States.

The complaint rigorously attacks the directors for their real estate policy, charging they held more than the legal ratio of such properties, that mortgages and liens were out of proportion to the value of the holdings and that inflated fictitious aand excessive appraisals of real estate were made.

Loans to directors and officers of the bank were scored in the complaint and it is charged the market price of the security units of the bank were fraudulently and artificially advanced to a price far in excess of their real value.

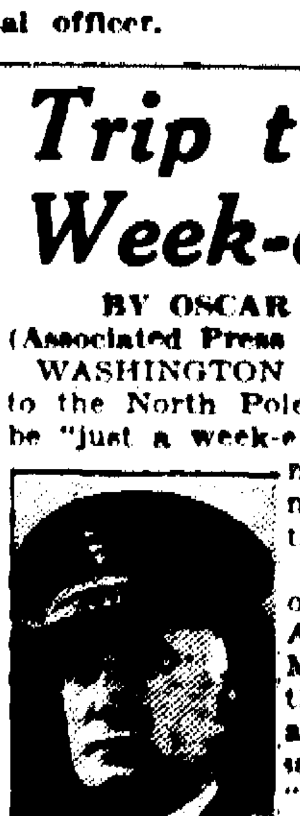
Trip to North Pole Mere Week-end Jaunt in 'Akron'

BY OSCAR LEIDING
(Associated Press Aviation Editor)

WASHINGTON Aug. 8—A flight to the North Pole would perhaps be "just a week-end trip" for the navy's new and mighty airship, the Akron.



REAR ADM. MOFFETT

Such is the opinion of Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, who says a polar flight "may easily be a possibility" because of the designed speed and range of the nearly completed dirigible.

"Of course, the Akron's place will be with the fleet," he says, "and any side trips could take place only after she has proved herself, and then only when not interfering with her primary military operations.

Polar Trip Easy

"However, a week-end trip to the North Pole may easily be a possibility and could be done with little effort because of the great radius of the ship nearly 11,000 miles, at 50 knots, without refueling.

"When not used with the fleet, the Akron might be able to take part in exploration of hitherto inaccessible parts of the world.

"For instance, the late Theodore Roosevelt's exploration of the 'river of doubt' in Brazil would be an infinitely simple matter to complete. There is particularly the unexplored region between Alaska and the pole."

The distance to the North Pole by direct air line is approximately 3,575 miles from Lakehurst, N. J., the Akron's base.

Military Value Shown

From the military side, benefits of dirigibles to the United States were summed up by the admiral in saying that "not only are airships of great value to the fleet, but we can build them for less than a cruiser, can build them faster in time of war, and we have an inexhaustible source of helium."

TOKYO, Aug. 8—Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., who are planning a non-stop flight to Seattle, were questioned by metropolitan police today concerning complications which arose with the finding of a camera in their plane upon their arrival here from Khabarovsk, Siberia.

The aviators were questioned about their flight over fortifications at Hakodate, Hokkaido island, and about a Russian map of Japan, which they said was the only map they could obtain at Khabarovsk.

There were indications the authorities would not reach a decision for several days.

LINDBERGHS AT POINT BARROW IN FAR NORTH

Arrive at Arctic Outpost After Perilous Flight Through Fog Banks.

WELCOMED BY CHEERS

Eskimos and Whites at Isolated Settlement Join in Greeting.

By The Associated Press

POINT BARROW, Alaska, Aug. 8—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, the flying vacationists, and their speedy monoplane arrived here today in the shadow of the arctic ice pack, at America's northern outpost, 320 miles north of the arctic circle.

Through low lying fog banks which shrouded their way, Col. Lindbergh piloted his plane from Aklavik, N. W. T., last night and set it down on open water at 2 a. m., Pacific Standard time, (5 a. m., Marion time). The hop of 536 miles along the shores of the Beaufort sea and Arctic ocean was made in six hours and 30 minutes.

Enthusiasm in this little community, a handful of whites and several hundred Eskimos, burst forth as the glistening low winged monoplane was sighted in the eastern sky.

Greeted by Cheers

Cheers rang out from groups on several high points of land in the community, and they rushed to the water front to await the mooring of the plane and the coming of the flier and his diminutive wife to shore.

On their flight, with the few hours of darkness overtaking them, and a heavy fog bank hiding the earth from them for an hour, Mrs. Lindbergh was in constant communication with the radio station here and at Aklavik.

At midnight a message said they had just emerged from flying through an hour of fog. Another an hour and a half earlier had told of Col. Lindbergh's turning the plane inland from the ocean to find better weather.

Received by Missionary

Within a few minutes after their arrival Dr. Henry Griest, medical missionary, put out to the pontooned plane in a small boat to extend the official welcome. Natives in skin boats jostled their craft nearby.

Last minute preparations for the welcome consisted of raising flags on several buildings, which were put in place shortly after the word was flashed from Aklavik of their take-off last night (though "night" here is only a few hours of darkness at this season of the year).

The plane was moored safely in short time and Lindbergh and his wife came ashore and were taken to the manse of Dr. Griest.

Supplies Meager

There were no gasoline supplies here, and such every-day staples as coffee, potatoes, eggs and tobacco were all used up several weeks ago. No ship had arrived through the ice this season to replenish them, but native foods and delicacies were ready in large quantities.

With half of their 7,000 mile aerial jaunt to the orient completed, the distinguished aviator and his wife were uncertain just when they would continue their flight or how they would refuel.

The ice pack had locked this port for 10 months and supplies of gasoline for Lindbergh left Nome several weeks ago on the cutter Northland were still aboard the vessel, ice-bound off Icy Cape, 100 miles to the southwest.

SHELTON OUT OF MAYOR RACE

Republican Candidate Withdraws as Other Opportunities Appear.

THREE REMAIN IN FIELD

Retires Before Primary To Avoid Possible Complications for Party.

The race for the Republican nomination for mayor narrowed to three candidates today with the withdrawal of Bert J. Shelton as candidate. Shelton announced his withdrawal this morning in a statement to The Star.

Has Other Offer

An opportunity to make gratifying connection of a permanent nature and a desire to avoid a strenuous political campaign next fall should he obtain the Republican nomination next Tuesday, prompted Shelton to retire from the race at this time he said today.

Shelton stated that he is not retiring in the interest of any candidate but that he announced his withdrawal at this time in the interest of party harmony and to forstall complications which would arise should he obtain the nomination and then withdraw when opportunities for other connections were presented.

His withdrawal after the primaries, should he receive the nomination, would leave the Republican party without a candidate, Shelton pointed out. By retiring from the race at this time he hopes to aid in the success of the Republican candidate at the November election, he said today. Shelton said he was not in a position to announce his future plans at this time.

Shelton's retirement leaves the field to his three opponents—William C. Phillips, R. R. [illegible] and Frank Paschall.

GREAT THRONG VIEWS NAMING OF AIR GIANT

Largest of All Zeppelins Is Center of Imposing Ceremony at Akron.

EPOCHAL AVIATION EVENT

Wife of President Occupies Leading Role in Launching of Navy Craft.

By The Associated Press

AKRON, O., Aug. 8—The U. S. S. Akron had only the horizons before it today.

"Air born" in a ceremony of superlatives, the world's greatest airship was formally christened by Mrs. Herbert Hoover, who released white pigeons from its massive hull in symbolic gesture to its future flights.

Its first fledgling effort was but a rise of a few feet from its supporting framework, yet it marked the beginning of a service under the ensign of the navy that brings the United States to the fore in Zeppelin construction.

More than 100,000 persons surrounded the great dock as Mrs. Hoover pulled the golden cord releasing the pigeons and said simply: "I christen thee Akron."

Overhead wheeled squadrons of army and navy planes in salute to the new mistress of the skies. Nearly 100 ships took part in the impressive formations.

P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation builders of the "Akron," and Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, spoke briefly.

The new dirigible, is as long as several city blocks and as high as a 15-story building.

Mrs. Hoover and her entourage of Washington officials arrived at 11:34 a. m.

Planes wheeled overhead in salute to the first lady of the land as she was escorted from the train to a luncheon being given in her honor.

Shortly before her arrival, Governor White of Ohio and State Director of Aeronautics Frank McKee landed here after a flight from Columbus.

Two groups of army planes were here for exhibition flying. The squadrons including 30 pursuit planes and a transport from Selfridge Field, Mich., and 19 army planes from Wright field, Dayton. Three other groups, one consisting of 12 navy ships already here, are scheduled to arrive and join in the exhibitions over the airship dock.

Not since the Montgolfier brothers at Annanoy, France, in 1783 sent up their 35-foot paper balloon, has the launching of a lighter-than-air craft created so much attention as the launching and christening of the 6,500,000-cubic foot helium-filled "Akron."

Product of Years' Planning

This huge ship, built by the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation for the navy, is the product of years of accumulation of knowledge of Zeppelin construction, far exceeding the dreams of Count Ferdinand Zeppelin, a half century ago. It is a marvel of aeronautical engineering, accomplished under the direction of the veteran zeppelin builder, Dr. Karl Arnstein.

Before the christening ceremonies, the doors of the hangar were swung open to permit the entrance of the spectators to the enormous floor where the dirigible rested. During the [illegible] army, navy and civilian airplanes were to maneuver over the dock.

president of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation, Rear Admiral William A Moffett, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics, and David S Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aeronautics

Mrs Hoover on her arrival was greeted by a reception committee of women who escorted her to the Portage country club for a luncheon for 300 feminine guests

The christening and launching in the afternoon will be followed by a banquet tonight for 900 persons, including army navy and marine corps officers, aviation and technical experts, newspaper men diplomats and other public officials

Among the notables at the christening were George White governor of Ohio Mayor G Lloyd Weil of Akron; Captain George W Steele former commander of the dirigible Los Angeles Commander Garland Fulton, in charge of the lighter-than-air division of the bureau of aeronautics

The Akron will make her trial flights under command of Lieutenant Commander Charles E Rosendahl and 69 officers and men

The history of the Akron goes back to 1926 when Rear Admiral William A Moffett convinced congress that lighter-than-air craft was the present-day word in the air military program of the nation

Congress authorized the construction of two giant dirigibles And the government, in awarding its contract, helped to create a lighter-than-air industry in America.

Work Started

In July, 1927 a contract was awarded the Akron corporation, and a year later $200,000 was made available for construction. Shortly thereafter the Goodyear-Zeppelin company started erection of the mammoth air dock here

Zeppelin patents held in Germany were obtained, and 13 experienced Zeppelin engineers were induced to come to Akron Among them was Dr Karl Arnstein, world-famed Zeppelin builder

Fabrication of the Akron was formally started November 7, 1929, when Rear Admiral Moffett drove a golden rivet into the master ring Eight hundred men then went to work on the ship, and in a year and a half since then the queen of the air has steadily taken form.

Plan Ocean Passenger Trips

After the Akron takes to the air engineers will soon lay the groundwork for the second Zeppelin, the ZRS-5, and later the corporation expects to construct mammoth lighter-than-air craft for transatlantic service.

These commercial ships will be similar to the Akron, except that the military equipment will be replaced by accommodations for 100 passengers.

The Akron is 785 feet from stem to stern, nine feet longer than the world-girdling Graf Zeppelin. She has a capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet, almost twice as great as the Graf, and her maximum diameter is 132 9 feet.

Her eight motors develop 4,480 horse power, and drive her at a maximum of 85 miles an hour She can cruise 10,580 miles without refueling.

Her lifting gas is the non-explosive helium.

Her armament will include 16 heavy caliber machine guns and five fighting planes. These planes, resting in a hangar within the giant ship, can be released and recovered by a trapeze arrangement

Many of Greatest Experts in Aircraft and Engineering Build Giant Dirigible

By International News Service

AKRON, O, Aug 8 - An "army of experts" was marshalled to build the monster Navy dirigible "Akron"

Planned to be perfect in every detail, the Akron was conceived many of the best known men in aviation, some of them pioneers and some of them guardians of the latest discoveries and achievements

Some know aviation only from the song of the motor; some are interested only in the metal that goes into the great leviathans of the air; to others the romance of flying is dug out of hours of tedious work over microscopes and test tubes in laboratories, some are masters of the art of shipbuilding, and some are workers in iron, but nearly all were experts, well-versed in the tasks to which they were assigned

Work on the great air crafts - the Shenandoah, the Los Angeles, the Graf Zeppelin, the R-100, even the historic old Tom Baldwin and its companions trained them for the construction of the "Akron"

A 61 year old sailor who battled his way up to the top of navy aeronautics was one of the men who planned the work. He is Rear Admiral William A Moffett, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, and after he left South Carolina, and later Annapolis, he was a seaman for many years.

Litchfield Valuable Aid

With him in engineering plans for the big ship was P. W Litchfield, president of the Goodyear company. A graduate of the well-known Institute of Technology in Massachusetts, he was a classmate of such men as Roger Babson, Gerard Swope of General Electric, and Alfred C. Sloan of General Motors. Big technical staffs worked under the direction of each.

With the skill required in the building of the Los Angeles at Friederichshafen as a background, Commander Garland Fulton, chief representative of the United States Navy at that feat, headed the navy group in the erection of the "Akron."

He is credited with developing the basic designs also for the ZRS-5.

Dr. Karl Arnstein, a pleasant, comparatively young Bohemian, who, it is said, has designed more zeppelins than all the other designers in the world, is chief of the industrial group. After planning the Los Angeles, which was his ship No. 70, he came to America, later deciding to become an American citizen.

For skipper a Texan, 38-year-old Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, was selected. He already has taught the aviation world much about handling lighter-than-air craft.

The builder of the Shenandoah, the first of the modern ships, is Commander Jerome C. Hunsaker, vice president of the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation in charge of developing passenger airship service Besides being a graduate of the Naval academy, he holds a doctor's degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Ohioan Has Important Part

An Ohioan who headed the balloon room, J. F. Cooper, has to his credit the building of more than 1,100 balloons and gas bags for more than 100 blimps

A former navy commander, Z. W. Wicks, was superintendent in the erection of the "Akron."

Cooper was not only a balloon-builder, but a balloon-racer until 1928 when his entry was struck by lightning. With hydrogen blazing over his head, he fell 2,000 feet. He was in the basket, unconscious, himself having been hurt by the lightning

America's champion free balloonist, Ward Van Orman, also is one of the staff. He is engaged in making weather studies to find the best place for terminating the proposed transatlantic air line

Still another expert is Dr. Wolfgang Klemperer, who during the World war was with the Austrian army's air fleet. His field is aerodynamics.

Gas Range Is New Feature in Equipment

By International News Service.

AKRON, O., Aug. 8 - For the first time in the history of dirigibles, a gas range which resembles the common kitchen stove in name only, will be used in the galley of the new giant navy dirigible Akron.

Cooking ranges on air liners in the past have been electric heaters and only after a thorough study of the problem of outfitting the galley on the ship was it decided to use a gas range.

Embodying many features never seen on ranges before, the new gas range will use natural gas as fuel because the equipment needed is lighter than that used to produce other forms of heat.

A supply of propane, one of the richest ingredients of natural gas, will be purified, compressed in liquified form and kept in special light cylinders in quantities sufficient to keep the range burning for 12 days

Because weight is the main consideration on a craft of this type, a large-capacity and heavy-duty range, yet light in weight was required.

A maximum 110 pounds was placed by engineers of the United States navy and the Goodyear Zeppelin corporation on the weight of the range. The use of metals not ordinarily used in the manufacture of gas ranges was required in order to meet the demand of the engineers.

According to specifications the range will be made principally of cast and sheet aluminum. Other metals, including nichrome, stainless steel, chromium-plated steel, cast-iron, bronze and magnetism will be used in small quantities.

Guthery Orders Ohio Conservation Commission Given More Responsibilty.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O, Aug 8--Demands made by the League of Ohio Sportsmen that the conservation commission be given more freedom in the administration of its affairs, were granted in part by an executive order issued last night by I. S Guthery, state director of agriculture

The order approved by Governor White, was issued after the chief executive, Guthery and the conservation commission had met in conference here. The conference was called by the governor after the league in session at Newark a few days ago, had demanded that the commission be removed from the jurisdiction of the department of agriculture and be permitted to function on its own It was charged at the Newark meeting that Guthery dominated the commission, and had made certain appointments in the conservation division without the knowledge of the commissioner.

Guthery's order set forth that it was issued for "the purpose of carrying into effect the spirit and full intent" the amended senate bill enacted in April, 1929

It stated that the commission and council should function in accordance with "the full intent and purpose of said act"

To make for continuity of policy and personnel and 'making most effective the spirit and intent of the law," the order went on, "the council shall plan develop, formulate and constitute all programs and policies of the division of conservation and establish such bureaus as may be approved by the governor"

MARLENE DIETRICH

The name of Miss Dietrich, wife of the German director, Rudolf Sieber, was brought into court records late yesterday, in a copy of the $100,000 libel complaint filed under seal in New York

Evil of a Divided Heart

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. JAMES O. DODD
Pastor Central Christian Church

Text: "Their heart is divided; now shall they be found faulty." —Hosea 10:2.

ISRAEL, as a nation, divided its heart between Jehovah and Baal, and so was given up to captivity. Men and women, as well as a nation, suffer evil because of a divided heart. It brings loss of spiritual blessing and leads to results that are much to be deplored.

Roger Babson has recently made a statement to the effect that the present depression is due to the fact that religion has been taken out of business and that things will not be as they should be until God is put back in. Today as never before do we need to remember that Jesus said, "No man can serve two masters—Ye can not serve God and mammon." May it not be because of our disloyalty to "the God who has made and preserved us a nation" that we are being found faulty as a nation today? It may be that circumstances will drive us to our knees before existing conditions become better, but it is only on our knees that we shall find God. May we bear in mind the admonition of the apostle when he said, "All things work together for good unto them that love God." Let us give God our whole heart. It is the only way to find God's approval and guarantee the reception of His promised blessings.

Marion Folk Spend Vacations Helping To Bring Light to Mountaineers

A vacation spent in the Kingdom Come settlement where John Fox Jr. found inspiration for his "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come' and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," has been the experience of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Turley of east Center street. Miss Mary Heininger of Spencer street and Mrs. J. F. Neidhart of south State street accompanied the pastor of Epworth M. E. church and his wife on their second trip to the mountain settlement.

Return This Week

The party returned Tuesday of this week, inspired by their trip which combined the pleasure of beautuiful mountain country with the pleasure of having done something worthwhile for a people who appreciate to the fullest every contact made with the people who have touched the refining things of life. Kingdom Come is in Kentucky near Pineville.

Dr. Turley conducted services every night while he was there and held chapel services at the school, and Mrs. Turley organized and directed two choirs, a high school and a junior, which are being carried on by workers in the settlement.

Kingdom Come settlement is in a valley, narrow and about 15 miles long, encircled by a mountain range known as Pine mountain. The valley is completely shut in except for a mountain road at one end and a footpath over one side.

The Methodist church maintains a high school in Kingdom Come valued at $30,000, with three high school teachers and two grade school teachers. The school enrolls approximately 150 boys and girls who grasp every opportunity to progress.

School in the settlement opens in July and closes the first of April. This is because the parents insist that their children be at home during the planting season. The girls work side by side with the boys in the fertile fields of the valley.

Ted, one of the promising young men of the settlement will be able to finish his high school course this year through the generosity of Dr. and Mrs. Turley and a club of members of Epworth church. The club has agreed to send $15 a month to Ted to make possible his living at the settlement and attending high school When he is finished he will go to Union college for a year and be granted a provisional certificate to teach at the Kingdom Come school. In this way he will work his way through college and some day, with his excellent prospects for a career as a teacher, his sponsors will be well repaid with the thought that they have brought one young man out of the darkness and into the light of a higher education and meaning of living.

The school is a three-story building. Most of the boys and girls walk eight miles a day to attend from 8 a. m until 3 30 p m. Few of the valley people have built their cabins close to the school, the small store and postoffice which make up the "settlement."

Learn New Ideas

Snapshots taken on the trip reveal handsome, well-built young men, pretty girls picturesque cabins and grandiose mountains. The girls are quick to note the change in styles outside their valley world and their pictures showed them all in modish wash dresses. Only one girl has taken to rouge, and she uses it sparingly, Mrs. Turley said.

The cabins as a rule are untidy but the men and women who came out of them to attend Dr. Turley's Sunday services were plainly but well dressed. The boys wear overalls to school, but on Sundays they blossom forth in suits.

The Marion party left here Sunday, July 26, and drove to Georgetown Ky. The next day they drove to the Cumberland gap and went to the top of Pinnacle mountain from which they viewed three states, Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. On Tuesday they went to the town of Cumberland and left their car to finish the trip to Kingdom Come in a motor truck.

Last year Dr Turley delivered the commencement address at Kingdom Come high school. There were four in the class then, and this year there are nine in the senior class.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, Aug. 9

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a very interesting one, promising eventful and gratifying conditions, with possible promotion or favors from superiors and welcome though unexpected change or travel. There may be minor anxieties and there is need for much precaution in handling all writings and agreements.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of an eventful year, with unexpected change or travel, promotion or preferment from employers with some interesting social, romantic or domestic experience. But they should be cautious with all letters, writings and agreements. A child born on this day should be clever, keen and capable, but may incline to expediency and shrewdness. It may have an interesting and adventurous life, being honored and favored by employers.

Notable nativity: Izaak Walton, renounced angler

For Monday, Aug. 10

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of aggressive activities, with prospects of rash and extravagant financial outlays, attended by hazardous and critical situations. There may be minor friction with superiors, tendencies to quarrels and vigorous disputes as well as rash and tumultuous conduct. With calmness and prudence there may be benefits and advantages.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of great activity, with predispositions to aggressive measures, strife, turbulence and enforced extravagance. With restraint, prudence and amiability there is much to be gained. A child born on this day may be disposed to be wilful, impatient, violent and tempestuous, requiring early restraint and discipline. But with these properly transmuted, there is augury of fair success in life.

Notable nativity: Herbert Hoover, President of United States.

Here is a frock that combines many of the most complimentary features of the new mode, youthful short sleeves, a softly draped neckline, a suggestion of slender molded-to-the-figure lines in slanting seamings, a front panel on the skirt, and a soft sash that marks the waist without defining it too sharply. The sheer fabrics such as georgette, chiffon, voile, or batiste are very attractive for this model, or for more general service it may be made in printed flat crepe or canton. A dainty print or one of the lovely pastels would be attractive.

Daily Proverb—"Many men continually attempt to make augur holes with a gimlet."

As we understand the situation, the firm name of "We, Us & Company" has been changed to "Slim, Little Blue Goose & Babee."

From screenless Paris comes the announcement that that city is suffering from a pest of little green mosquitos which do not bite, but are most annoying. They aren't mosquitos!

From one of the food and cooking pages of a Chicago daily we glean that a green fig is a great delicacy, much prized by epicures. That let's us clear out as an epicure.

New York City police records show that more than 75,000 persons have been given permits in the last two years to carry pistols. Huh! What the decent citizens of New York should have are bullet-proof vests. They can't fight machine guns with pistols.

Before their owner had discovered her loss, a New York taxi driver turned over to the police jewels valued at $200,000 left in his car by a woman passenger. Honesty has not become extinct, even though one is at times impelled to think so.

When a nineteen-year-old girl was taken into a Buffalo court on a charge of intoxication, it developed that, driven by necessity, she had been acting as a snooper for a prohibition "buy man" on a promise of $10 for every piece of evidence she got leading to a "knock-off." It is gravely feared that something has gone wrong with Commissioner Woodcock's promise to put prohibition enforcement on a higher level.

Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, says that America has one automobile to every 4.9 persons while France has but one to every twenty-seven because America has prohibition while France hasn't; that over in France one person out of every four is making poison to kill the other three. Well, even at that rate, France has twenty-six persons out of every twenty-seven ready to work until they are poisoned, while over here we have but one out of five.

The Depression and Its Causes.

There is an idea that the depression is puzzling because it is impossible to view it in the right perspective. Every one is too close to it.

A report recently received in the United States may come closer to representing what would seem from the proper perspective than most guesses. It is the first fruit of a study of the depression ordered by the eleventh assembly of the League of Nations, and prepared by the League's economic and financial organization, including the international labor office.

Following the war, the report says, economic reorganization was accomplished rapidly. By 1925, it had progressed further than was expected. From 1925 to 1928, economic progress was unique in the world's history. The output of foodstuffs and raw materials increased by eight per cent. and of manufactured goods by nine per cent., while the amount of world trade increased by fifteen per cent. Foreign capital flowed freely into countries that needed it.

Even while this was taking place, even while the world was riding on the crest of the wave, unemployment figures started to mount. Efficiency was taking its toll of wage-earners and statistics, an outgrowth of efficiency, were telling efficiency what it was doing. All the time overproduction was piling up stocks and the international structure was being strained by a shifting of barriers and markets. This could go on just so long until prices started to fall and business was obliged to slow up.

In the United States these "structural maladjustments" were accompanied by the collapse of stock prices after a period of heavy speculation. Concealed weaknesses of the prosperity period cropped out. Commodity prices tumbled. Investors who had learned to expect large returns on their money were not attracted by the prospect of low returns. The depression was on.

When it will stop, the report concludes, depends "not only on such natural forces as the gradual consumption or decay of stocks, but also on events of a non-economical origin, and upon the economic policy pursued. The whole post-war development brings out very clearly the economic importance of political conditions, both international and domestic. When these are disturbed and confidence is shaken * * * economic life suffers and recovery can not but be impeded by political uncertainties."

In other words, the League of Nations is venturing no guesses that might turn out silly. When the full report is submitted to the League assembly next September it will make interesting reading because it represents a very fair perspective.

Newton D. Baker Emerges.

In his important convocation address to the Institute of Politics at Williams college, Newton D. Baker asserted that public opinion quite frequently runs in advance of leadership. This is true, it would seem, of Mr. Baker's possible candidacy for the presidency in 1932. Leadership is hanging back, waiting for a cue from public opinion. So far as leadership is concerned, in official utterances Newton D. Baker is only one of many candidates, no better or no worse than any of the others.

Public opinion, however, sees Mr. Baker emerging as probably his party's strongest man, even though he personally refuses to become active. Comparisons of his qualifications with those of Governor Roosevelt, of New York, who has been the object of a definite boom, turn out more favorably for Mr. Baker every day. Governor Roosevelt started early; he may have reason to reflect sadly on the effects of early starting later on.

The Democratic field is wide and, it must be admitted, a little too intricate to be understood from one viewpoint. In New York there is the Roosevelt-Smith-Young triumvirate of presidential possibilities; in Ohio, the Baker-Bulkley White-Cox quartet, in Arkansas, a vast deal of potential strength in Senator Robinson, and in Maryland a strong "favorite son" stand for Governor Ritchie. It follows that the same things look different in New York, Ohio, Arkansas and Maryland.

But, though Ohio may emphasize its candidates' proportions and deliberately lay down other possibilities, opinion in all quarters encourages the emphasis. In the Ohio group, Mr. Baker commands the most attention wherever Democratic presidential possibilities are being discussed. Quoting Mark Sullivan, one of the most able of the Washington correspondents, justification for putting emphasis on Mr. Baker "lies in the fact that some very shrewd politician and observers believe that, as the cards lie, the Democratic presidential nomination will be uncertain until the very last moment, that Roosevelt will not quite reach, and that in the ensuing confusion within the convention, Mr. Baker is the man that a thousand bewildered or drifting delegates are likely to turn to."

An appraisal of Mr. Baker necessarily mentions first the excellent position he enjoys in public esteem. He has held no public office since the close of the second Wilson administration terminated his service as secretary of war; he has not appeared in public attention in the postures that political practice recommends, but he has risen steadily in popularity, nevertheless. He bears the reputation of possessing one of the nation's finest minds, and it surely is not idle to observe that Americans honor intellectual excellence when it commands itself to their attention.

Mr. Baker, in his personal statement attached to the Wickersham report, advocated repeal of the eighteenth amendment and remission to the states of questions of policy and enforcement. On economic questions, he is a liberal, confessing, however, that good liberal theory is shaped with close regard to practical possibilities. He is fifty-nine years old, and his health is not robust. There is, however, no such disposition to question it as there has been to question the health of Governor Roosevelt. In politics he bears the descriptive tag of "Wilson Democrat." He has advocated the policies of his former chief regarding the securing of international peace by means of the League of Nations and the World court.

Mr. Baker is very much in the early presidential running on the Democratic lanes. At this stage, when men are being considered rather than party candidates, Ohio is satisfied indeed that its most garlanded citizen is receiving so much attention.

The state board of game commissioners of Pennsylvania announces that the English sparrows and starlings are destroyers of Japanese beetles and other insect pests, every specimen of either bird killed having been found gourged with the beetles. Those Pennsylvanians will be making the sparrows and starlings songbirds next.

From New York City comes the report that the bank accounts of Mayor Walker have been subpoenaed and that Colonel Samuel Seabury, of the legislative committee, will neither deny nor confirm it. No matter what may have been the condition of his bank accounts before he started for Europe, if Jimmy hangs out there for a couple of months, as he plans, they are liable to be somewhat depleted, if that term may be used.

Michael Trotta and Nicholas Florida, who killed a Chicago policeman, have been given prison sentences totaling 145 years each. Sentences like that should hold them for a few months at least, even considering the free and easy paroles which are the rule up there.

Married "on a bet," a young Washington woman soon discovered that her husband was a rum-runner, and now she wants her marital shackles severed. Any woman who marries "on a bet" could hardly anticipate anything other than a rum bargain.

A judgment for $11,846.80 has been awarded against a California motorist as damages for injuries suffered by one woman occupant of his car when it turned over as he was complying with the request of another woman to be kissed by him. No kiss is worth any such money.

Katherine MacDonald, one-time queen of the American beauty pageant and former screen star, has sued Christian R. Holmes, her California millionaire husband, for separate maintenance. Katherine has this advantage: she has probably become accustomed to marital shipwreck by this time, it being the third time her bark has gone upon the rocks.

Tipped off by phone that "a few bottles of liquor" might be found in an inconspicuous shed in one of Chicago's residential sections, operatives of the state's attorney seized 918 gallons of liquor valued at $50,000 and hauled it away to headquarters despite a phone offer, made to the sergeant in charge while the raid was on, of $25,000 to pass up the job. This particular sergeant was honest, but proffered bribes of $25,000 have a tendency to demoralize in many cases.

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR BAD MOVIES?

Editorial Opinion.

ALFALFA BILL AND DOLLAR OIL.

Governor Alfalfa Bill Murray, of Oklahoma, gets into the oil controversy and the headlines through an executive order closing all the prorated oil wells in the state. In addition to issuing the order he establishes martial law about every well and posts national guardsmen to see that the order is enforced.

Alfalfa Bill adopts these extreme measures because of the low price of crude oil and his determination that Oklahoma producers receive a dollar a barrel for their product. The current price is about half that figure, but the Oklahoma wells are to remain closed until the price reaches a dollar, if the governor has his way.

His program is similar in some respects to that adopted by the farm board two years ago with respect to wheat. But instead of government buying at a fair price Murray directs curtailed production, which is the answer probably to the low price of wheat and oil alike.

But curtailment in a single state, important as Oklahoma is in oil production, will hardly correct the price situation of which producers everywhere complain, or bring the price back to one dollar a barrel.

Curtailed production with proration is widely accepted as the proper approach to the oil problem, but with producers in some centers unwilling to prorate, and others disinclined to do so or to curtail production because of possible violation of the Sherman act, the prospect is not bright for better prices.

Alfalfa Bill Murray's scheme will go down with many half baked proposals offered in the last two years to solve economic problems. Like the rest it will end in failure. The federal courts are likely to find it out of bounds at an early date. The Oklahoma courts, he says, "can't do a thing," for Alfalfa Bill is governor and is a law unto himself.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NATURE'S POWER PLANT.

Pilot Ralph Wensinger, who is doing some work for the weather bureau around Cleveland, tells a story of experience in a "thunderhead," or storm cloud, above that city that in a manner reveals the nature of the great static electricity machines that make the lightning. He went into this cloud deliberately, to find out what it was like. He learned that it was a mass of vapor violently stirred by furious winds. It was a veritable tornado encompassed within the limits of the cloud formation. His plane was thrown around as he had never before known a plane to be tossed. One of his instruments indicated that at one time he was being lifted at the rate of 1,400 feet a minute. Thrusting his stick down to the limit he spun his propeller to the tune of a speed of 165 miles an hour, and still he could not overcome the upward thrust of the wind. Not content with this experience he sought another, a smaller cloud, when he finally made his way out of the first great ball of vapor, and this he found to be even worse. The updraft carried him literally to the top of the cloud, and there it ceased and his plane stopped, but he would have been shot out by his own momentum, but for the fact that his parachute had caught against the cowling and his heels were hooked under the seat. This indicated that the furious gust of wind was confined within the cloud itself.

Here is an explanation of the manner in which the atmospheric electricity is generated. The tearing, boiling currents of air confined with the cloud grind it out even as the friction of brushes upon the glass plate of the old-fashioned "static machine" generates it in the laboratory. The cloud becomes a highly-electrified unit. When the charge grows great enough, it "lets go" by leaping to a cathode, or negative pole, which may be another cloud or a point on the surface of the earth, from which a cone of electric accumulation protrudes, as it were. That is the accepted hypothesis of the discharge which causes the phenomenon known as lightning.

Just why the swift movement of the vapor-charged air of a cloud should generate electricity is no more definitely understood than why the friction of a piece of silk upon a plate of glass creates a condition in which fine particles of matter are attracted and held and, on a greater scale, a spark is emitted when metallic contact is approached. Numerous theories are entertained on this score. The atom and the ion play a part in these hypotheses, but the real specific cause and the true nature of the process is yet a secret. The experience of Pilot Wensinger suggests that there is no longer reason to question the manner in which "static" is generated in the clouds. From that point to the heart of the mystery of nature's most violent manifestation remains to be traversed.—Washington Star.

"An Apple a Day."

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Here comes a new medical use for the apple. Because of recent work conducted in Berlin a diet of finely grated apples is recommended for young children with diarrhoea. Surprising, isn't it?

Acute or chronic diarrhoea is a frequent complaint of very young children. In addition to its being a rather stubborn condition to treat, it often leaves the child in a very weakened condition. Following such an attack and even after prolonged treatment, the child suffers from lowered resistance and may succumb to some other ailment.

In preparing this diet, which is called the "Moro apple diet," ripe mellow apples are peeled. The seeds and cores are carefully removed and the apple is reduced to a fine pulp by a grater.

The child receives three to four ounces of this food at each meal-time. No other food is given. No medication is given and, its supporters say, it is not necessary to give enemas.

The diet is satisfying and so the child does not complain of hunger. In cases of extreme thirst, an occasional drink of cold water or tea may be given.

It is reported that in nearly 100 per cent. of the cases the cure of the diarrhoea was prompt. After the diarrhoea ceases there may be a slight tendency toward constipation. This is temporary and usually adjusts itself.

As a rule, the treatment is extended over a period of three to four days. If the condition reappears the treatment may be repeated.

There is a lot of nourishment in this diet. No one need fear that the child will starve.

Those who are familiar with the annoying and distressing symptoms of chronic or acute diarrhoea in a child will welcome this suggestion. It is so simple and so obviously harmless that it is worth trying. Anyhow, I wanted you to know what the Berlin doctors are doing.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

A.B.G. Q. How can the hair be made thicker?

A—Brush the hair daily and use a good tonic. For further particulars send self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

• • •

D.D.A. Q.—What will correct constipation?

A.—Eat simple, well-cooked food. Plenty of fresh green vegetables, fresh and stewed fruits. Drink water between meals. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

B.B. Q. What can be done for eyes that water in the cold weather—could this be due to too much reading, causing strain?

A—It is more or less natural for the eyes to water a little when out in the cold. If the trouble is excessive have the eyes properly examined. There may be a disturbance of the tear duct in this case. The eye specialist will advise you. — Copyright, 1931, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

What Will Better Marion?

The following are the answers of three citizens to the question, "What Will Better Marion?—the second in the questionnaire circulated by Dr. Carl W. Sawyer to get a comprehensive insight into the community feeling regarding our home city, in the hope of arriving at a remedy for handicaps, if any, from which Marion may suffer. From day to day, answers of various citizens to the same question will be given publicity on this page.

More cooperation between her citizens. A greater civic consciousness to be brought about by a campaign of education. A properly drawn and enforced zoning ordinance. A live organization to better Marion composed of men who live in today and who are dependent upon her welfare for their ultimate success, not of those who are dependent upon their father or grandfather for their position today.

A little more enthusiasm and push in ventures already undertaken. Not altogether as an individual, but as a community. In other words cooperation, all working together for a common good, and take as our slogan, "Boost, Don't Knock."

Intelligent, honest efforts, be honest with ourselves and the community. If one can not speak a little good of his home town he should move out, we don't care to harbor that brand of citizens. Neither do we care to hamper their advancement if opportunity awaits them elsewhere.

Electrical Marvels.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The invention of the oscillation valve by Sir Ambrose Fleming, the transformation of this valve by the addition of the grid into the thermionic valve of Lee de Forest, and the later improvements and magnifications of the valve, constitute some of the most important modern contributions to the field of electrical marvels. The valve, as Ellison Hawks states in the book of "Electrical Wonders," finally solved the problem of a satisfactory generator or high-frequency continuous oscillations, and made it possible to accomplish electrical wonders that even a quarter of a century ago were but scientific dreams.

The thermionic valve possesses the important property of acting as a generator of continuous waves. There is no other high-frequency generator which is so economical and compact. A steady improvement in design and workmanship was brought about by various inventors working on the problem. Large valves have now been made which are capable of great radiating power. A generating apparatus of from 200 to 300 kilowatts is necessary for stations communicating on long waves over distances of 3,000 miles or more. At first a number of small valves was used; but later on, larger and larger valves were invented after extended research. In these larger valves, which are subjected to excessive heat the glass bulb is replaced by a metal case, which is cooled by means of a surrounding water jacket.

In 1922 a valve giving five kilowatts was made, with plates of molybdenum, allowing the use of high temperatures without impairing the efficiency. Water valves were made having an output of twenty kilowatts and operated by a current of 15,000 volts on the plate. Twenty of these twenty kilowatt valves, arranged in parallel, were sufficient to transmit good signals from Long Island to Nauen, Germany, with an aerial current one-half of that used when the Alexanderson high-frequency alternator was employed.

Since that time, immense strides have been made in the development of high-power valves. Dr. Irving Langmuir invented a fifty kilowatt valve. Six valves, which could be contained in an ordinary sized suitcase, were employed to transmit signals from America to England, the power used being 15,000 volts.

The recent invention of the magnetron, by Dr. Housekeeper, dwarfs into comparative insignificance everything that has preceded it in this line. This magnetron has the amazing output of 1,000 kilowatts. In these giant valves the filament is adulterated with thorium oxide, which increased the electron emission of the tungsten 13,000 times, substantially reducing the energy expended in heating the filament, and considerably increasing its life. It is predicted by Hawks that the giant valve may some day be used to transmit energy by wireless. Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Sicilian Metropolis.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

Most of us reared on dime thrillers think of Sicily as an island of bandits and vendettas, the home of a people whose violent and savage emotions overwhelm them far too often to make pleasant hosts.

Any visitor to the beautiful Mediterranean island, if given a chance, will tell you a different story. He would relate how hospitably he was greeted by the natives, how they greeted him with smiling courtesy and proudly showed him what there was to see in their country.

Palermo, a lovely city with 500,000 inhabitants, is a place to visit and remember. Invasions throughout the centuries by armies of various nations have all left their mark on the city, but the accumulated result is something completely individual. The cafes, certain dishes, customs and manners have characteristics that are all their own. Entering the harbor you see Mount Pellegrino rising majestically behind the bright spruce city.

Incidentally, there has lately been built a splendid road which zigzags up the mountain and affords a superb view of almost half the island and the city, harbor and the sea.

Besides the theaters and cafes, Palermo enjoys gay festivals at Easter time and in midsummer. Her patron saint is Santa Rosalia de Sinibaldi and on the greatest festival days and occasions her relics, ordinarily kept in the cathedral, are brought out.

The cathedral, as well as the Palatine chapel and the churches of Monreale and Cefalu gives the modern world splendid ideas of the finest architectural monuments of the Dark ages. The cathedral, or duomo, was built in 1184.

But it is not these, nor even the great Mount Pellegrino that you will remember years after you leave Sicily. What you will most surely recall is the fine simplicity and the half Spanish elegance of the people of Palermo.

Pardoning Power in Ohio.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH

In Ohio the right of pardon as to all ordinary crimes is vested exclusively in the governor, and it can not be limited by law. The exercise of the power has been regulated at various times by different legal provisions, the pardon board, the clemency board, etc—all intended to be helpful to the governor, but the governor may pardon or withhold pardon, regardless of the action of these tribunals.

There are two offenses, however, as to which the governor of Ohio has not the power of pardon. They are treason and impeachment. Pardon in these cases is a legislative act. The governor may suspend a sentence for treason, and report it to the legislature for action, but he can not pardon. As impeachment is a legislative function, so also is clemency for impeachment cases.

The pardoning power has been from old times and in practically all governments, reserved to be exercised by the sovereign power. The president of the United States has exclusive power to pardon persons convicted of offenses against the people and government of the United States. It is unlimited.

In some of the states of the United States the pardon of the executive must be approved by one or both houses of the legislature, as are executive appointments. All pardon provisions are based mainly on the recognized liability of human tribunals to err.

In Ohio the people have shown a jealous care as to the use of the power to pardon, recognizing in it, evidently, the possibility of abuse, as in the case of Governor Ferguson in Texas a few years ago, so there was added in Sec. 2, Art. III, of the state constitution, which lodges this power in the governor, the requirement that the governor shall make a detailed report to the legislature of every case in which he has used the power of commutation or reprieve, and his reasons for doing it.

AUTO HITS MOVING TRAIN AT CROSSING

Columbus Woman Drives Auto into Locomotive Here.

A broken lens in her glasses and slight bruise under the right eye were the extent of the injuries suffered by Mrs Thomas Mayer of Columbus when the automobile in which she was riding collided with a moving freight train at the Silver street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad late last night.

Mrs. Mayer said this morning she was driving east on Silver street at a fair rate of speed and had reached the crossing before she was aware of the approaching train. Realizing it would be impossible to stop, she said, she turned the car north, the direction in which the train was going The momentum, however, carried the car against the engine, the drive rods catching the right front fender of her machine and dragging it for nearly 20 feet The heavy train was brought to a stop in a short distance she said

The right front wheel of the car the fender and part of the running board of the car was wrecked It was taken to the garage of the Haberman Chevrolet Co on west Center street.

GERMAN ELECTION SET FOR SUNDAY

Reichsbanner Celebration Also on Program for Plebescite Day.

By The Associated Press

COBLENZ Germany, Aug 8 While the United anti-government elements Hitlerites, Communists, Steelhelmeters and Nationalists — are marching to the polls tomorrow to put an end to the regime in Prussia, the two-day meet of 60,000 Republican reichsbannermen, from all parts of the Rhineland, will come to a climax

Meanwhile, sponsors of the plebiscite, which calls for dissolution of the Prussian diet, have protested to President Von Hindenburg the emergency decree which forced all Prussian papers to print notices advising the voters to stay away from the polls Government officials announced certain alterations would be made in the decree law when Chancellor Bruening returns from Rome

It may or may not be a coincidence that the two events fall on the same day, for ostensibly the Reichsbanner meeting is to celebrate the twelfth anniversary of the signing of the Weimar constitution which made Germany a republic

Firestone Sees Brighter Future On State Tour

That general business conditions in Ohio are slowly improving is the opinion of Harvey S. Firestone Jr., vice-president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., expressed here yesterday.

Firestone was interviewed last evening after he arrived here to inspect the company's service station on east Center street of which O E. Bonnell is manager.

With three other men, Firestone has been making an airplane tour of the company's principal branch retail stores in Ohio. They flew to Marion from Columbus and Cincinnati yesterday landing at Marion airport shortly after 4 30 p. m. They left for Akron at 6 p. m.

Accompanying Firestone were R. R. Leisure of Columbus and J. H. Boden and G H. Minnick of Akron.

There seems to be a general feeling of optimism among the people that the country is returning to a state of prosperity nearer normal Firestone said. Steel plants in southern Ohio have reported an improvement in operating conditions, he said.

Firestone would not give his opinion on the length of time he believed it would take to recover from the depression He said that recovery is bound to be slow and much will depend on the general attitude of the people. There has been too much talk about depression in places, he said, where depression does not exist.

DENIES CHARGES IN ANSWER TO COURT

Former Galion Bank Head Asks Probe in Receiver's Allegations.

By International News Service

CLEVELAND Aug 8 Requesting a federal investigation into charges made in the cross bill filed by A. E. Evensen, receiver for the Citizens' National Bank of Galion O and denying certain allegations made by the receiver, James Earl Casey convicted president of the defunct bank yesterday filed his answer to the cross bill in federal district court here

The answer was written by Casey at Atlanta penitentiar, where is now serving a term of nine years for alleged defalcations in connection with the bank's funds Casey's statements were included in a letter received at the federal court yesterday

Charging that Evensen has filed "with your honorable court false bills both in this case and in one other case pending in regard to the failure of the Citizens' bank" the former president begged a "rigid investigation" into the charges contained in the cross bill

Casey asked the court to appoint an impartial representative to probe into "my standing with the real folks of Galion"

The former president denied that he had removed assets from the bank for his own use and that he was intimately associated with Mary Volk former cashier at the bank whose suit for recovery of $208 000 from former directors brought the cross bill from Evensen

"I charge and can substantiate that this sort of propaganda (regarding Miss Volk) has been carried on by the receiver his attorneys and directors since the closing of the bank for purposes of ruining reputations for their benefit," the answer stated

Casey asked the court to strike out the reference of his alleged associations with Miss Volk from the records

"The writer pleaded guilty upon an agreement which he believed would assist in clearing the situation but was double crossed," Casey charges

The former president charged that other directors of the bank also should be held liable for their part in the crash of the Galion bank

LIGHT IMPORTANT

Proper Illumination Big Item in Bed Room Planning.

In planning the lighting for a bedroom, it is important to remember attention to special lights for dressing, reading and emergency will make the room more comfortable.

A center fixture which gives sufficient illumination is an essential part of the light plan. The fixture should be preferably of clear glass designed so that the bulb is completely hidden from below, the light being thrown up to the ceiling and reflected down again.

This is important for two reasons: the indirect light is a restful light, and because a person reading from a reclining position will not have his eyesight injured by looking directly at the bulb. A 75-watt or 100-watt lamp will give sufficient light when only one lamp is required.

There should be at least one mirror lighted from both sides to make easier the task of dressing. These lights will serve the intended purpose better if one is placed on each side of the mirror, and should have translated shades which allow the light to penetrate softly to the face.

For dispersing unruly crowds the Berlin police department has been equipped with an armored automobile from which a stream of water is expelled at high pressure.

BUILD UP BIG TRADE HERE

Have Installed More Than 500 American Furnaces.

Bechtel & Wetzel since starting in business seventeen years ago, have sold and installed over 500 American Boiler Plate and Ravenna furnaces in Marion.

"AFCO" is the new name for the American furnace.

Recently, because of other American furnaces coming on the market—taking advantage of the reputation the American Boiler Plate Furnace has earned for itself, the name of the American Boiler Plate Furnace has been changed to the "AFCO" Boiler Plate Furnace.

Everyone knows that health is the most precious thing in the world. You get healthful heating with an "AFCO" boiler plate furnace.

From the time of the cradle to old age, health stands out as the most important thing in our lives.

Health Important

We must have healthy children or we cannot have healthy men and women. During the tender years parental care is of major importance. Children must have the right kind of food, shelter and clothing — the three prize requisites for a healthy mind and body.

A discussion of the first and third requisites—food and clothing—we must leave to others while we discuss the second requisite — shelter. We place it second in importance although it really ranks on an equal basis with food. More than half our lives are spent indoors and half the year in closed, artificially heated homes.

The heating in your home is more than a comfort convenience. It can be a health builder or a menace to health.

An "AFCO" healthful heating system will make it a health builder and protector.

Handle Shingles

Reroof with Hexagon or Tru-lok Asphalt Shingles as an aid in providing a healthful house is good advice.

One of the many advantages of Hexagon or Tru-lok shingles is that they are especially designed for application over the old shingles. You do not have to remove the old shingles, this saves you an added expense. Hexagon or Tru-lok asphalt shingles keep old shingles underneath to save the benefit of the extra layer of protection from summer's heat and winters cold. Neither a Hexagon or Tru-lok shingle roof require any upkeep expense — no painting or repairing is necessary. Thousands of these roofs have been applied in all parts of the county and not one has ever cost its owner one cent of upkeep. Not one has ever leaked or ever will. The shingles are sold here by Bechtel & Wetzel.

Important, too, is the fact we specialize in the application of these roofs. Our years of roofing experience, our reputation for careful workmanship and square dealing and our sincere desire to please you, assure you complete satisfaction.

If your home is in need of a new roof, let us suggest that you take advantage of our free roofing service. At any time we will be glad to inspect your roof—make a complete report of its condition—and help with suggestions for its improvement at economy — all without any cost or obligation to you.

USE AMERICAN FURNACES

Shown above are two attractive Marion residences, both heated by American Boiler Plate furnaces. On the left is the M. L. Wilson residence. The furnace in this house was installed in 1925. On the right is the Oscar Lusch residence which is kept comfortable in the winter with an American Boiler Plate furnace installed in 1926. The houses are located on the Harding highway, just east of the city limits.

FRENCH FLOWER PLAN POPULAR

By Margery Taylor
Interior Decoration Editor, McCall's Magazine

The French style of flower arrangement will probably be more popular this season than the Japanese.

But, regardless of the style followed, the flowers must be in the spirit of the room, their colors harmonizing with the color scheme and the container in keeping with the furniture.

That is why the restraint of the Japanese flower arrangement seems right for the more formal and severe room settings. Somehow it seems at home in the modernistic room.

Strange how one of the charming arts of an ancient people should be so appropriate in manner and spirit in a setting of the day after tomorrow!

One of the very strict rules governing the Japanese arrangement is that only one variety of bloom should be used—and it must be in season.

Nor should the flowers be in clusters. Only two to five stalks are considered correct and three are preferable. The stems are graded in length, and, as is so frequent with ancient arts, the three-stalk arrangement is symbolical of various trinities, such as father, mother and child or heaven, earth and man.

The French flower scheme is suited to the more ornate of the period rooms or to the freer atmosphere of the room which has been artfully "unplanned."

Following it, the decorator may be lavish and gay in arranging the flowers—and even daring. Large masses of blooms, perhaps as many as ten different varieties, may be grouped.

Appropriate containers for such an arrangement are urn-shaped vases in white alabaster, porcelain or glass—in fact, any type of eighteenth-century French style.

The perfect touch is achieved when the size of the flower mass is in exact proportion to that of the container.

For a vase or urn, the highest flower or stem should be one and a half times the height of the vase. In a low bowl, the flower mass should be one and a half times the diameter of the bowl.

Contrast in combining colors is very effective—a little blue in a yellow bouquet, one yellow rose in a bowl of pink ones, a stalk of yellow snapdragon with blue delphiniums.

JUDGING CEMENT BLOCKS

An excellent method of judging the quality of hollow cement blocks is by the conditions of the edges and corners. Such units, if made of good cement and sand or cinders in the correct proportions, will have strong edges and corners which are not easily broken off. A large number of broken edges and corners indicates soft, weak blocks which probably will not stand the tests of time.

ECONOMICAL MASONRY

Residences or buildings of masonry construction give enduring beauty and grow old gracefully. They are sources of satisfaction and this is one of the reasons why home builders are choosing concrete building units for their new homes. These units, when laid in a wall, are known as concrete masonry, one of the most economical wall materials in use today.

ROBERT PETERSON'S LABOR OF LOVE

By The Schaffner-Queen Co.

Bless Robert Peterson, say the English. He was a very religiously inclined man who lived during the eighteenth century.

So impressed was he by the martyrdom of the Covenanters, who had suffered persecution under Charles II, that he devoted forty years of his life to the erection and repair of monuments over their graves.

He wandered from churchyard to churchyard in this occupation, living on whatever food nature and kind friends provided, and accompained by only a shaggy white pony as a companion.

There is no tribute so noble or so sincere as that paid to those who have passed on to another existence. That is why the goal of the conscientious, sympathetic funeral director is set so high. He is satisfied with nothing short of perfection in the performance of his duties and he strives towards that ideal unceasingly.

This is the 41st of a series of editorial advertisements appearing in this paper each Saturday.

Marion Girl Guest at Queen's Party on English Trip

MISS VIRGINIA COBBOLD of 569½ east Church street, who is visiting relatives in England this summer, is seeing English life under conditions which are unusually pleasing.

Miss Cobbold is getting a close-up view of the higher social circles as well as that part of English life which the American traveller ordinarily meet.

It was her good fortune to be a guest at the Fourth of July luncheon at the American embassy in London and later in the month she was a guest at the queen's garden party given in the Buckingham Palace grounds. The garden party was one of the big events of London's social season.

These experiences are decidedly exceptional, and Miss Cobbold is probably the first resident of this city ever to enjoy them.

Just Things

—BY EDNA S. DUTTON—

Helpful Hetties

IT DOESN'T take a lifetime of schooling to find out that there are more helpful Hetties and Henrys in the world than there are any other single species, and sooner or later this great urge to run other people's affairs crops out in every one of us. Just at present this ofttime friendship destroying emotion is in the ascendancy witn us, and we should say how. But do we stop at telling our friends how they could improve themselves and run their business? A thousand nays. Ours is a big idea that would prove a boon to thousands. Picture the chorus of blessings which would pour forth from the throats of the footsore and weary should nice, comfortable seats be placed on those inviting-looking lawns at both the Central Junior and the high school buildings. Imagine parking one's self for a couple of breaths before carrying on a bit farther, or meeting the chums there instead of pickin' 'em up and layin' 'em down on the corner. Of course there is nothing mercenary in this but we grant it would be a break for folks on Orchard street and points west.

Thrillers

DO YOU recall the first novel you ever read? I mean one of those flimsy, paper-backed affairs that you sneaked way up stairs, in the loft or some other favorite hide-out, to peruse. Wasn't it a thriller? And how we hated the villains with their sleek manners and curling moustachios. Our innocent young mind was first besmirched by one of the vile books at a tender high school age, and were we thrilled. Imagine anything as daring as "Her Only Sin." Sounds hot, doesn't it? If we ever knew who the author was she or he has long been forgotten but we do remember that the heroine's name was Veronica. And her sin! Well her parents died when she was very young and she was compelled to go to live with her uncle. The uncle, Veronica loved very dearly but he had a designing wife and a very selfish daughter. Veronica, of course, was very wealthy and the uncle was her guardian who led his family to believe the money belonged to him. To make short work of a long story, the selfish cousin saw Veronica surreptitiously burning a letted and she promptly conveyed the news to Veronica's lover, with whom she herself was in love. Our heroine denied everything as was to be expected so what conclusion could anyone draw. Believe it or not, when all was told, Veronica's only sin was that she burned her father's will in order to save her uncle's name and let his family have the money.

Weather

IT ISN'T the least bit encouraging to think of the fall hats and gowns in the windows and those raspy-voiced critters one hears in the trees at twilight, both harbingers of the colorful autumn when one is mopping one's brow and trying to look cool, these days. The one redeeming feature of the whole series of hot days is that it's good training for a talking marathon, should there ever be one.

They will also stop enroute for short visits with friends at Lexington, Neb., and Dale, Ore. Miss Ethel Grubb is spending the time with Miss Leona Ritterspach during their absence.

New York Stage Stars Visit with Marion Friends

JOHN and Jane Adair, the "John and Jane" who broke all records here by playing more than 50 weeks at the old Grand theater, are guests at the Carl Danner home on Girard avenue this week.

John and Jane are both with Shubert in his Broadway shows. John has been with the producer since 1922 and Jane joined the Shubert ranks in 1928

The two, who have appeared here in stock, are spending the summer at Rye Beach. Wednesday they came for a visit with their close friends, Mr. and Mrs. Danner, and will be here for a week.

When John goes back to New York City he will enter the cast of "Good Companions," an importation from the London stage which probably will open Oct. 5 in New York. Jane's vehicle has not been definitely selected, but undoubtedly will be one of the new Pirandello shows, John said this morning.

Last year John was with "On the Spot," another London importation and Jane was with "From Nine to Six."

The Australian government is planning to take over all better class radio broadcasting stations in the country.

[illegible] in this room once [illegible] was ill, so that the nurse [illegible] the connecting room [illegible] now the marquesa's. Fel[illegible] college had come home [illegible] and bunked there. . . . [illegible] saw it with strange eyes. [illegible] had so filled it with her [illegible] that no former associa[illegible]ned.

[illegible] had become ominously [illegible]wnstairs. Kirk stepped in[illegible] some water into one of the vases, set the flowers on the table beside the bed. Already their perfume was beginning to permeate the room.

Kirk went quickly out the open door to his own room. But it was a long time before the voices downstairs ceased, before there came steps on the stair and good nights called along the hall.

* * *

Juanita lay watching the world grow pale with dawn. The sea wind was blowing into her room, moist and gentle, bringing a smell of rain. Yet the sky held stars; the day would be clear. Perhaps it was the flowers she smelt.

Juanita looked at the flowers, a crimson blur in the half-dark. Kirk had left them there, she knew. Kirk had sent her the message that they were in bloom, and she had known that he was in the garden waiting to finish with her that interrupted moment on Caprice. She had stayed in the house, singing, talking to Adrian, scarcely conscious that it was he, so afraid was she of Kirk, of his voice, his touch, his kindness—of the things he said. Alone with him in the garden, what might she not have said, in turn? There, on Caprice—She had felt his unspoken profanity, when the marquesa had come running with her cry of "Look!" . . . She herself would never forget to thank the marquesa for that rescue.

Now she was not afraid. It was not love she felt for Kirk. What it was she did not know. How could a heart that had been drained of faith furnish a soil for love? It was not love—and it was not night! So she need not fear. She would meet Kirk in the garden, as she had promised. He must not suspect that she was afraid. . . .

Fear. If she might only know a day, a night that had no moment when terror, black and cold, did not crawl against her heart. Last night it had stayed long, not only terror of what lay behind, but an indefinable dread of something ahead. She had risen from the bed, sat by the window looking at the sea. The Thing had stood beside her, watching too. She had started into the marquesa's room, but the marquesa snored so peacefully that Juanita had crept into bed again, going at last to sleep.

The night was almost gone. She would not be afraid of the past or anything to come. Juanita slipped from bed. The mocking bird sang suddenly.

"A little late, Senor," she said, closing the marquesa's door as she ran the water in the bath between the rooms.

The mocking bird flew away, leaving the honeysuckle shaking. Juanita put on a sleeveless dress of pink cotton homespun, winding her hair about her head. There was no time to dally. If the marquesa was going to wake and come in Juanita preferred her to do it after she was gone.

Kirk was waiting under the oak trees by the south wall. A table for two had been set there. The world was very dim and still, and full of faint night-fragrances.

"This is good of you," Kirk said. "All your beauty sleep—"

"Beauty sleep?" smiled Juanita. "Do you know what we say in Spanish? 'It is a sin to sleep when the moon is shining.' I'm beginning to believe it's a sin to sleep in the dawn."

Down a little path Rhoda was coming bearing a bowl of strawberries.

"Rhoda may pour your chocolate, but you're to pour my coffee," Kirk said to Juanita.

"Spoiled, aren't you,"

"Well—desirous of being, at any rate. You didn't come last night," he added. "I suppose you were too happy with Adrian."

She was watching Rhoda dish the strawberries. She could be very silent, reflected Kirk. In another woman the trait would have exasperated him. It exasperated him with her sometimes. Rhoda went back along the little path and Kirk added, "To think I am leaving you here all day with him—with Adrian."

"Is he dangerous?"

"How should I know?" Kirk spoke testily. He had not slept well, and Juanita looked so disturbingly pretty and remote. He had been overjoyed just now to see her coming from the house. Now other things worried him. "It depends on your susceptibility whether he's dangerous or not. At any rate," Kirk finished, "I'm leaving you here with him."

"Why don't you take him?"

"How? He's plotted this for days. He's even planned a moon for tonight—on the ride home."

"He has plotted nothing with me," said Juanita.

"He didn't think it necessary. Here you are, and here he is. And here's the garden. Did you ever in your country hear of the dog in the manger? Well, here he is. I can't use the garden myself, or see you all day—so I don't want any one else to."

"You are hard on yourself," Juanita said gently.

Rhoda was coming down the walk with covered dishes on a tray—a puff of omelet, strips of bacon, hot biscuits, feather-light, and a pot of wild plum jam. Kirk held out his cup to Juanita. These New Orleanians! They took their coffee seriously and continuously. Kirk watched the lift of her rounded arm as she tilted the urn. Rhoda went back down the path.

"Oh well," said Kirk, "you've poured my coffee anyway. I'll remember that all day." Then softly, "I love you, Juanita, with your hair like that. I love you in that little pink dress. I love you any way at all," he added crossly, so that Juanita laughed.

"Promise me one thing, Juanita . . ."

After a moment her eyes met his.

"Don't be afraid," he added. "I won't ask you not to fall in love. Nothing not to do. Only—if any one tells you he loves you today—laugh at him too. Will you promise that?"

"Oh, certainly!" said Juanita laughing already.

"And if he asks you to marry him, tell him you couldn't think of it."

She had sobered a little at that.

"Just for today," said Kirk.

"That would be easy."

"All right, then, I shan't nag you any more. I'd just like—I'm going in town to work, and I'd merely like to do it. . . . Look at that canary, will you? He's waiting for me to throw some crumbs." Kirk broke a biscuit into bits, threw it out on the grass.

A myriad of wings from the branches about them. Juanita threw a bit of bacon which started a small war. She and Kirk were silent, watching the birds.

Juanita scarcely saw the birds. The black Thing that had stood beside her in the night was mysteriously there again, turning the message of the dawn into a hideous thing seeming to say: Whatever has lain dark and secret shall be unveiled in the light.

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

THIS was Saturday, and would have been a holiday if it wasn't vacation time. I got up and let Jubilee down by his rope and then I put on my short britches of the new thin suit my mother had got me so that I could go in swimming in it when I felt like it. Then I went downstairs and got the pail and got my milking done and fed my face and the whole bunch started to go to the pasture and we went around past the Lost Bag's of Tripe's. We weren't going to stop there because it wouldn't get us anything if we stood around with our tongues hanging out so far we would have to hold them up with our hands to keep them from dragging in the dust; but when we got there we were supprized. The soda water stand was broke and was half way acrosst the sidewalk, and there wasn't any soda water for sale or anything, and the Lost Bag of Tripe was setting on the front step with his chin in his hands looking like he had lost his last friend. We all went in and sot by him and Ebbie asted him if he was in trouble. He said he was. He said his father has got a black eye and a swole lip and his mother had to rub his back last night in the night with anarchy. He said that he tended his stand last night til his folks et, and then his father tended it till he et, and he was just coming out again after supper when a big red faced man with a sand and gravel truck drove up and told his father to handle him up a bottle, so his father did and then stood there waiting for his nickle and grinning up at the man, and the man held back his head and took a big mouthfull and then chocked and sprayed it all over the Lost Bag of Tripe's father, and the Lost Bag of Tripe's father got hold of one of the man's feet and gave a pull and the man hopped out and came down on the other foot, and from then on till it was over it was so mixed up with the stand and the tub and everything that he couldn't see what happened, but when the man clumb back on his truck one of the Lost Bag of Tripe's father's eye was swole shut and he was spitting blood, and when the neighbors came in to see about it he told them all how he had licked the truck driver, but if he licked the truck driver and the truck driver looked any worse than he did, good night! "Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

The Arrival of Phil Veritzen

I SAW Dicky's head jerk back as Katie announced that Philip Veritzen was waiting for me downstairs, and I knew that the interruption to our discussion was as unwelcome to him as it was to me.

One thing was certain. The question of what to do with the offending speeches of the character, Vickers, had been taken out of my hands. There was no time now to cut them out. I must not keep Philip Veritzen waiting. That was not on the free list when the great producer was considering a tyro's play.

I looked at Dicky doubtfully, wondering whether he would reiterate his injunction to say no word of my desire to delete the character of Vickers from the play, but it was evidently still uppermost in his mind, for, as I gathered up my manuscript and started for the door, he said warningly:

"Remember, old dear, if you love me, not a word to Veritzen about that character, Vickers, today. If he doesn't toss him into the incinerator himself, something I am banking on, we'll mull the thing over after he goes and find out what is the best to be done."

"Good Hunting!"

Again that curious, unworthy resentment against Dicky's suggestion stirred deeply within me. Was I becoming that most poisonous of all things, a "temperamental author" who can hear no criticism or suggestion concerning creative work?

"All right, I promise that," I said, and into Dicky's eyes came a happy, satisfied expression which vaguely irritated me at the same time that it appealed to something tenderly maternal in me.

He reached the door as I put my hand upon the knob, swung me around facing him, and, bending, kissed me warmly.

"Good hunting, old dear," he said emphatically, "remember. If you need any help in managing the old goat, just send me an S O S."

A Memory

"Oh! I'm sure he is very tractable," I returned, smiling at him.

"'Leave us hope,'" Dicky quoted with a grin. "But I'll stay in my own room and get some letters out while he has you on the carpet. When you finally tie a can to him, will you come up and let me know how it all struck him?"

His manner was casual, purposely so, I guessed, but sounding distinctly through it was an eagerness most flattering to me. He was as anxious to know Philip Veritzen's verdict on the third act of my play as I possibly could be, and with a heady joy I realized that while Dicky's jealousy of my work was a problem with which I would have to reckon, yet with true masculine inconsistency he was intensely proud of it, and that he would not only be disappointed but exceedingly furious at Philip Veritzen should he fail to approve of my third act.

For a few seconds, which seemed as many hours, I stood hesitatingly in the hallway after Dicky had gone into his own room. Not for worlds would I have had him guess the reluctance, amounting almost to terror, which suddenly had come over me at the prospect of again meeting Philip Veritzen alone.

Looking Back

With the exception of the short call upon the whole family which he had made the night before, with no opportunity of anything but perfunctory greetings, this would be my first meeting with the great producer since the Christmas night of the preceding year. At that time he had totally misunderstood an emotional plea I had made to him for relenting toward his son and Dicky's niece. I had been startled and displeased at his assumption that my appeal to him had its roots in a romantic affection for himself. Vividly etched in my memory was the change in his voice from romantic adoration to fury as I made clear to him how repugnant to me was his misunderstanding of my attitude. Then had followed his sardonic declaration that I was the first woman to fool him and that I must take my punishment for it.

I gave a reminiscent little shiver at the terror which had shaken me as he swept me into his arms. Dicky's opportune, but distinctly angry entrance had saved me from the kiss which I had so dreaded, but the strain on my already frayed nerves had been too much, and I had fainted in Philip Veritzen's arms with the harrowing anticipation of Dicky's unforgiving anger before me.

When I had revived it had been in another room than the library, with Dicky, Katherine and Lillian bending over me. The last words I had heard Philip Veritzen speak had been an injunction, "Look to your wife, man," and miraculously Dicky had appeared to be following his injunction with no tinge of anger in his manner.

Dicky had explained a few moments later that "the old goat had been decent enough to explain everything," and my Christmas night, [illegible] I had feared [illegible] by the Veritzen [illegible], had ended in the [illegible] of my sudden realization that, as I had told Dicky, I must leave Mr. Veritzen's employ in order to take over a new job, that of caring for Junior's little sister.

To Face Him

Until the preceding evening I had not seen Philip Veritzen since that night although he had sent beautiful flowers to me and costly gifts for my baby daughter at the time of her birth.

Lillian's assurance that I never would have any more trouble with him, that he would preserve a strictly professional, though friendly camaraderie in any future relations we might have, because "old Phil did not care for the Madonna motif," and that my "lure" for him had vanished, had been borne out by the tenor of his letters concerning the play which he had asked me to write for him, and the first two acts of which he had heartily approved.

But though everything pointed to a peaceful and unemotional interview with my former employer, it took every ounce of grit I possessed to open the door of the library into which Katie had ushered him.

GOOD PITCHING KEEPS CARDINALS WELL UP IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

Grimes Hurls Champs to 8-0 Triumph Over Chicago; Brooklyn Beaten 3-2.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

One of the great contrasts in baseball is found in the first and seventh place teams of the National league, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Phillies. For a couple of years the Phils have been considered as a great team except for its pitching staff while the Cards have put mound work a bit above the other departments of play.

This year, a less lively ball was expected to bring some sort of a change in the results, but the Phils continue to belt the ball at a great rate without getting anywhere in the standing while the Cardinal hurlers have put St Louis far ahead

Klein Belts Two

It took a great exhibition by Chuck Klein, star slugger of the Phils, and a dismal pitching display by Clarence Mitchell to give Philadelphia a 13 to 5 victory over the New York Giants yesterday. Meanwhile the Cards, with about the same amount of hitting coasted through to an 8 to 0 triumph over the Chicago Cubs, behind the expert mound work of Burleigh Grimes. Klein clouted his twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth home runs of the season to drive in four counters.

Brooklyn got some great pitching from Hollis Thurston for eight innings, but it didn't last through the ninth and they lost a 3 to 2 decision to the Boston Braves. Thurston gave only three hits in eight frames, then yielded two more and the first Boston run in the ninth. Jack Quinn replaced him and allowed Billy Urbanski to double with the bases full.

Pirates Beat Reds

Pittsburgh's Pirates settled the fourth National league clash in short order when they fell on Red Lucas and Owen Carroll of Cincinnati for seven runs in the first inning and went on to trounce the Reds 9 to 3.

The Chicago White Sox, with Urban Faber on the mound, chalked up their ninth victory in 14 games with the St. Louis Browns by pulling a 2 to 0 victory out of a tight pitching duel.

The other American league teams had an open date.

KAPPAS TAKE LEAD BY WINNING 6 TO 1; SERV-U-WEL LOSES

Erie Traffic Club Upsets Grocers 7-5; Excavator Victor Over Wesley Junior Nine.

RESULTS YESTERDAY

Kappas 6, Prospect 1; Erie Traffic club 7, Serv-U-Wel 5; General Excavator 7, Wesley Juniors 0.

* * *

The Prospect Firemen had just one bad inning yesterday against the Kappas and that one bad inning may cost them the chance to compete in the Little World's Series for the city championship. The score of the game was 1-1 when the big blow-up came. When the one bad inning, the third in the game, was over the Kappas were out in front by a 6-1 margin. Five runs isn't always enough to win a ball game in Marion softball but it was enough yesterday for the Kappas, the way they were playing ball. Prospect couldn't get anything like a hit when they were in a position to score. Several men got on base through some good hits and a few Kappa misplays but the hits were so scattered and the errors at such a time that they did no damage.

Gene Gunder, Kappa center fielder and Winnett, Prospect third sacker, turned in the fielding gems of the game. Gunder made several nice running catches in the outer gardens. Winnett had only one outstanding play, a one handed stab of Rank's liner down the base line in the fourth, but that was enough to make him a star. It would have been good for a double in any game

Deadlock Possible

The defeat of Prospect gives the Kappas a one game lead with a single game to play. There is still a possibility of a tie for the title in case the Erie Traffic club should beat the Kappas next week. Either Prospect or the Serv-U-Wel Grocers would gain the tie for the top as they are now tied for second and meet each other next week.

The Erie Traffic club put another severe crimp in the pennant aspirations of the Serv-U-Wel nine yesterday when they hammered out a somewhat surprising 7-5 victory over the Grocers. After the first few innings of the game there wasn't much doubt as to who was going to win. It became a question of how bad the Serv-U-Wel was going to get beat. The railroaders ran up a commanding lead early in the game but weakened in the latter frames and allowed the Grocers to challenge their lead. Ray Walters and Starling Somerlot smashed out long home runs in the fourth inning to bring the score up to within reach of the pacesetters but the lead was too much to overcome.

In the third and only remaining game of the day the General Excavator made certain the fact that it would not finish in either of the last two places of the standings by taking the measure of the Wesley Juniors by a 7-0 count. The Excavator jumped onto Gorenflo for five runs in the first and then coasted on to win easily.

The K. of P. and Company B teams did not play, having played both of their games in a double header earlier in the season

COLUMBUS WINS TO GAIN SECOND PLACE

Home Runs Bring 2-1 Victory Over Minneapolis; Apostles Beat Toledo.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 8 — If Fred Stiely, Milwaukee southpaw, ever attains a reasonable degree of consistency, he probably will do his pitching for the St. Louis Browns, which owns the Brewers.

Steily last night had one of his good streaks and let Indianapolis down with two hits, for an 8 to 1 victory.

The victory did the Brewers no particular good, but the defeat dragged Indianapolis down to a tie for second place with Columbus.

The Red Birds out-homered Minneapolis to win a 2 to 1 decision and ruin a fine pitching job by young Carl Wilson, Miller recruit. Wilson permitted only four hits, but two were homers one by Pat Crawford, his nineteenth of the season, and the other by Evar Swanson, Minneapolis' run was the result of a circuit drive by Frank McGowan.

The onrushing St. Paul Apostles handed Toledo another poke on the chin, taking the fourth game of the series, 14 to 3.

Kansas City gained the edge in its series with Louisville by walloping out 18 hits for an 8 to 3 victory.

Sun Beau Seeks Third Straight Stake Triumph

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 8 — Sun Beau the turf's champion money winner, today sought his third straight rich stake triumph in the $25,000 added Hawthorne handicap — the first move toward boosting his record to $400,000 before he retired.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer, owner of the six year old son of Sun Briar-Beautiful Lady, has announced that his champion will go in only four more big events before he is retired.

He was an overnight choice to repeat his triumphs of the past two Saturdays when he won the Arlington cup and the Arlington handicap, in spite of his staggering impost of 131 pounds He was quoted at 4 to 5 overnight and was expected to go to the post at that figure.

His chief rival in recent races, Gallant Knight and Mike Hall, apparently wanted no more of Sun Beau, for they were not named among the nine other prospective starters. Willard Mack's four year old, Satin Spar, and Plucky Play, winner of the Stars and Stripes handicap at Arlington park, were regarded as the likely contenders, while Silverdale and Paul Bunyan also had backing.

The distance was one mile and an eighth.

"Gabby" Again Named To Helm of National League Champs in 1932.

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8—The "old sergeant." Charles E. (Gabby) Street, who came to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1929 with the title of second coach but in reality "chaperon" of Grover Cleveland Alexander, has won himself a more or less permanent job as manager of a ball team known in the past for the uncertain tenure of its managers.

Gabby will lead the Cardinals again next year, his third at the helm of the national league champs

In announcing last night that Street has signed a one-year contract "and both of us are perfectly satisfied with the terms," President Sam Breadon said the manager's "judgment, ability and courage have been proved day after day and week after week" since 1929. Breadon said the Cardinals' 8-game lead over the second-place Cubs did not influence his decision to reappoint Street.

JENNER LUNCHES IN SOFTBALL TOURNEY

The Jenner Lunches have a strong team lined up for the tournament. "Bob" Gamble and "Hap" Applegett will do the hurling for the locals.

"GIRL OF HIS DREAMS"

Actress Starts Boy Playing Golf

By The Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla.—Many nine-year-old boys are admirers of Norma Talmadge, and so is Richard Weiss, but for a different reason.

To Miss Talmadge and Joe Turnesa, Richard owes his classification as a golf prodigy at nine.

For young Richards shoots less than 100 about every third trip around 18 holes, and is satisfied with his game He drives 150 yards regularly, with a smooth easy stroke, and seldom gets into the rough.

When he was five years old, Richard was given his first clubs by the actress, while Turnesa tailored them to fit and gave the lad his first instructions

The boy's father, Harry H. Weiss, was running a movie house in Mount Vernon, N. Y, where Miss Talmadge made a personal appearance in connection with one of her pictures. When she returned to her dressing room she found young Richard ahd pulled one of her clubs from the bag and was taking hefty swings at an imaginary ball.

The following day Richard watched Miss Talmadge, his father and some friends play a mixed foursome. The actress allowed the boy to hit several balls and gave him her clubs after a poor round. Turnesa, a spectator, offered to cut the clubs down for Richard.

Playing over a strange course in Miami, where he now lives, young Weiss carded 104 for 18 holes. Once during the round he got into the rough, twice his ball fell into traps near the greens, but both times made beautiful mashie shots onto the green. A pair of sevens were his worst holes.

Richard's game is not long, but it's straight as an arrow and he seldom wastes strokes to get out of trouble.

CALIFORNIANS FIGHT FOR TOURNEY CROWN

Youngsters Win Way to Finals in Public Links Golf Play.

By The Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn, Aug. 7—California had a big golf argument to settle with shots over the Keller club course today.

Two of its star players, Joe Nichols, 15-year-old high school sophomore from Long Beach, and Charlie Ferrara of San Francisco, were the only survivors in the final 36-hole round of the national public links golf championship and faced each other for the title.

The All-California final assured the trophy, emblematic of public fee course supremacy of America, its first trip to the Pacific coast.

Nichols, because of his great comeback in his semi-final match with Ed Greenway of Seattle yesterday, was the fans' choice to win the crown, but a study of the golfing artistry of the two promised nothing but an even battle from start to finish.

C., D. & M. Beaten 5-2

The C. D. & M. Electric company recreation baseball team was defeated 3-2 yesterday afternoon by the Delaware All-Stars. "Bob" Gamble hurled for the losers until the seventh inning when he allowed the first three men up to hit safely. With the score 3-2 against him, three men on and no one out "Hap" Applegett took the mound and walked in two runs. He then retired the side without further scoring. It was the second time the team has beaten the Electricians.

HANDICAP FEATURE WON BY ABBE HEIR

Sir Oliver Rose Takes 2:23 Pace; Parshall Drives Winner in 20-16 Class Trot.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

THE most successful meeting in the local history of horse racing! That's what race officials pronounced the first local night meeting of Short Ship events which were brought to a conclusion last night at Fairground track. Five nights of racing were staged. Attendance figures were higher than at any meet previously run for several years.

A four event program brought the meeting to a conclusion Favorites romped home ahead of the field in nearly all of the heats of the final night, just as they had done in the four preceding nights There wasn't a real long shot came through to win a race all week

The time of the races last night was somewhat slower for the most part than that which has been turned in on previous nights of the meeting but that doesn't detract from the attractiveness of the events. The finishes were close and the competition was keen all the way. It required four heats to decide the winner of the 20-16 trot claiming event, the second race of the evening.

Favorite Loses

Miss Harvest Time was the favorite to cop the first event, the 2 23 pace (second division) but failed to come through for first money Plaxico piloted the bay mare around the oval in first place in the opening heat but could do no better than fifth place in the second heat and she was withdrawn from the race

Sir Oliver Rose, another horse the bookies were counting on to come through, took up where Miss Harvest Time left off and copped the final two heats and the race Sir Oliver led the field most of the way in the two heats and finished well ahead of the field on both occasions.

Hollyrood Lexington, piloted by Dr H M. Parshall of Urbana, captured the money in the second event, the 20-16 trot claiming race. "Doc" was able to get nothing better than a seventh and third in the first two heats but won the third and fourth to capture the event The first two heats were split between Nick Silk, who took the first and Guy Duffey, who took the second. Nick Silk led the field of three all the way in the extra heat until the last 50 yards when Parshall whipped his charge into the lead and beat Nick Silk to the wire. The finish was close.

Abbe Heir Wins Easily

Abbe Heir, with a 60 feet handicap to overcome, romped home ahead of the field in straight heats to take the Handicap pace event, the third on the program. The Great Guy came in in second place in all three heats. He finished only a nose behind each time but lacked the necessary reserve to carry him across the wire ahead of the leader. In all three heats, he led the field into the stretch but lost out by a scant margin.

Barney Google was too fast for the field in the final event of the program, the 21-17 claiming pace In both the first and second heats, the bay gelding of Frank Junk of Clarksburg, O, came in ahead with plenty to spare. Once he was out of the race it was a free-for-all between the rest of the entries Commodore Burns captured second money when he beat Hugh M. Napoleon to the wire by a length and a half in the third heat.

PLAY DELAWARE

Morral Expects Hard Game at Lincoln Park Sunday.

Delaware will bring a rejuvenated baseball team here Sunday afternoon to face Morral of the Rural Community league at Lincoln park. After a bad start early in the season the Delaware team has added a catcher and third baseman and has defeated two of the leaders in the last two weeks

The game is called for 2:30 p m. at Lincoln park. Manager McIntire was undecided today whether he would take the mound himself or send Harold Fetter, a southpaw, against the visitors. Morral is at present fighting for a position among the leaders.

GRAINS AGAIN MOVE HIGHER

Brisk Upturns Recorded on Receipt of Liverpool Quotations.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—Grains scored fresh upturns early today, influenced by full response which the Liverpool market made to yesterday's advances here. Liverpool reported material improvements in demand for all descriptions of wheat, with lessened offerings from southeastern Europe. Opening ⅛@⅝ cents higher, wheat afterward held near the initial limits Corn started ⅛@¾ up but soon sagged.

Wheat price reactions that followed an early bulge wiped out at least for the time being today's gains. The setback, which left yesterday's advance untouched, was due largely to selling based on weakness that corn developed as a result of auspicious weather for growth of the new corn crop. Corn fell more than 1½ cents from the top point reached at the opening.

Execution of standing orders to sell September corn at 52¼ cents and December at 42 started the downward slide of the corn market and indirectly resulted in cancelling wheat gains. The weather man showed good rains throughout the greater part of the corn belt and this circumstance gave an advantage to bears. There also was considerable profit-taking in the wheat, the market showing at one stage three cents rise compared to yesterday's low point. Much enlarged export business in North American wheat overnight was announced, 1,500,000 bushels or more. Oats followed corn.

Provisions advanced despite lower quotations on hogs.

Will Thinks Farm Board Didn't Go Far Enough in Urging Less Wheat Acreage

BY WILL ROGERS

WELL all I know is just what I read in the papers. Been under the weather and been doing nothing but reading, and taking some pills, and trying to talk the Doctor out of some more grub. Good deal of debts have gone under the Auctioneers hammer since I last communed with you, both private and National and International. Germany got a Moratorium, the Big International Bankers got theirs guaranteed, Taxpayers got another assessment, and the Farmers got exactly what everybody had been predicting they would get—two bits for their wheat. But we are told that indirectly this good that we did Germany will trickle to get through the weeds and mortgages.

Course here is one thing where the Farm Board is right; (I havent heard that for so long that it scared me when I wrote it down) They told the Farmers NOT to plant so much wheat, they said said there was going to be a big supply this fall, and you knew yourself that they hadent sold last years crop. So I kinder string with with the Farm Board in that. You know the Farmers dont use their own heads a whole lot. Some of em don't even use anybodys.

Wrong Direction

Now it was last year that the Farm Board bought up all this wheat, and had nothing to do with it. From the day they started buying the first bushel it started going down, and no matter how fast they bought it went down faster. Well there you was. You hadent put in this years wheat yet. Now Russia had an awful big mess of it, and if you read, you knew that they would lose money on it in order to take away some one else's market, especially us. You knew that they would perhaps under the five year plan put in more wheat than ever before, because they aint supposed to know how to raise anything else.

Now the Argentine had a bumper crop. They had their last years crop still to sell. Then you got to take into consideration that every country both big and little that havent heretofore raised wheat, knowing they were at the mercy of these few big powers have encouraged raising all that their folks could. Italy and England raises a lot more than they used too; not near enough but it all counts up.

Now then here is the Farm Board with their millions of bushels. Granaries full of private wheat. The worst depression in years. Now I just want to ask one question. What in the World made any Farmer think that things could possibly be any better than they was when he planted the wheat? Had he been listening to Chamber of Commerce speeches? How did anyone think that just over night we was going like we used too? What was there to look forward to that was going to raise everyone out of the dumps any more than there is something to look forward to that is going to lift us out overnight now: not even overnight but over a year? So why would a man, knowing the amount of wheat that was going to be on the market the next year, knowing that nobody was going to have anything to buy it with if they did want it, why would he go and gamble everything he had in more wheat?

Question of Smartness

We used to think that a wheat farmer was smarter than a Cotton Farmer, and the Wheat one thinks so yet. (Well maby not now). But, by golly, it looks like there aint no way to get any people to cut down on anything as long as they think the other fellow ought to do the cutting down first. There is some excuse for the Cotton Planter, especially the renter one, for he has to put in what he is told too or else, and he hasent enough machinery and stock to put in anything else. But with the wheat Farmer its most generally a man that is his own boss. He generally owns the land, or has it rented to do with what he likes.

So it looks like he is going to do the same as the south has with its cotton, just go broke with it and be buried right in the patch, but he is going to plant plenty of cotton. You know there is few things that even the Government cant protect you against, even if they wanted too, unless they send you to an asylum. Now here is where the Government made their mistake: they said "Dont raise so much wheat," so you raised it, and they cant say they "told you not to." But they didnt tell you not to raise anything, and everything else has been as low as wheat. See? Thats what they should have done. They should have said, "Dont raise a thing only what you can eat yourself." You would have let your land gain a year, you would have saved all your seed wheat, or corn, or Oats, and while you wouldent have made anything you wouldn't have lost anything.

But the Gag now is not to raise anything only that fits your appetite. Then prices dont worry you. The Republicans dont fret you. The Democrats dont preach at you. Just raise all you can eat and let the low prices go by.

MUSSOLINI ACCEPTS GERMAN INVITATION

Will Go to Berlin for Return Visit in Discusson of Problems.

By The Associated Press

ROME, Aug. 8 — Premier Mussolini today accepted Chancellor Bruening's invitation to go to Berlin for a return visit with German officials at a date yet to be determined.

It will be the premier's first formal visit outside Italy since he went to London in 1922 shortly after he became head of the Italian state. He himself will fix the date for the trip to Berlin.

Announcement of his plans came after he and Dino Grandi, the Italian foreign minister, had conferred for an hour at the German embassy with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius.

At the same time the conferees issued a joint statement of the results of the meeting today and yesterday.

"Various exchanges of views have taken place, accompanied by a sense of reciprocal friendly comprehension and deep cordiality," the statement said, "the general European situation has been extensively examined and the necessity for active collaboration by all governments has been recognized.

"The conclusion also has been reached that it is necessary to exchange data on armaments so that the forthcoming disarmament conference will produce effective results in the interest of peace and the economic and moral life of the world."

PRESIDENT PROMISES TO ASSIST JOBLESS

Hoover Plans To Meet Unemployment Situation During Next Winter.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—A promise to the country that next winter's unemployment problem will be successfully coped with has been made by President Hoover.

Regardless of the scope or character of unemployment needs they are to be met, the chief executive said, in announcing he had called upon all interested agencies for data on the situation in a nationwide survey to determine the probable load of distress.

"While improvement in the situation in many directions seems promising," Mr. Hoover said in a formal statement, "the problem, whatever it may be, will be met.

"With the organized cooperation of local and state and federal authorities, and the large number of relief and charitable organizations, the problem was successfully handled last winter.

"We shall adapt organization methods in such manner as may be necessary for the coming winter.

"The first of the facts to be determined is the probable volume of the load of distress which will need to be provided for."

For the past three weeks, the chief executive said, he had been studying the problem and had conferred with many state officials, business, financial and labor leaders and important officials of relief organizations.

The President said the figure of 6,000,000 unemployed arrived at last year was not entirely accurate and indicated that he placed little faith in the estimate as a basis for relief work.

It would take a month, he said, for the government agencies to complete a study of the situation and methods of dealing with it.

CANNING PEACHES ARRIVE ON MARKET

Provide Only Variation on Produce Shelves During Week.

The arrival of peaches for canning, provided practically the only variation on the markets this week. Southern grown peaches which have been coming on the markets for the last several weeks, became more plentiful early in the week and dealers were advertising peaches for canning as low as $1.33 a bushel. The prices advanced later in the week, however, and yesterday found a general price of $1.45 prevailing. Home grown peaches are expected next week. What the price will be is not being predicted by dealers.

Watermelons were plentiful all week and the price showed but little change. Cantaloupes, however, advanced later in the week and were selling yesterday at from 10 to 20 cents. After an absence of nearly two weeks, huckleberries were again on the market Friday. The berries were shipped in from northern Michigan and were of a fairly good quality. Only a few were on the market and dealers were asking 30 cents a quart.

Sweet corn was practically the only green vegetable that was on the market in any great quantity during the week. It became more plentiful as the week advanced and yesterday found prices reduced to from 20 to 30 cents a dozen. The dry weather has cut short the crop of peas and beans in the city and vicinity. At no time during the week was the supply of these vegetables plentiful and what did appear on the market was of an indifferent quality. Home grown tomatoes were plentiful nearly all week and the price dropped to five cents a pound.

85-Ton Magnet Devised To Fire Atomic "Bullets"

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

By The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn, Aug 8—A new energy machine, which will use a huge 85-ton magnet to produce atomic "bullets" equal to those from a 25,000,000-volt X-ray tube, is under development at the University of California.

This great scientific "gun" promises to produce for the first time on earth, part of the enormous atomic energy believed to exist in the hot interior of the sun. Its projectiles are a stream, or beam, of protons, the heavy centers of atoms.

Science long has sought such a weapon to shoot at heavy atoms to break them down. This disintegration will show it is possible to "unlock the energy of the atom;" and what is more important to science to learn the now mostly unknown structure and properties of the nucleus of the atom

The California gun obtains its high energies without using much power. It combines a magnet and an electrical field to set particles or atoms—protons and electrons to whirling with a centrifugal motion in a vacuum. Finally they are shot out of the vacuum tube at speeds of 10,000 miles a second and upward

Successful guns already have been made at California with small magnets. They were developed in the physics department by Prof Ernest O. Lawrence and M Stanley Livingston Dr Lawrence is east to complete plans for equipping the huge gun now contemplated.

Italians Regard Signora Mussolini As Mother Who Puts Children First

Gives Time and Attention to Health and General Welfare of Family.

By The Associated Press

ROME—Signora Rachele Mussolini wife of the Duce, devotes her life to the four of her five children who live at home.

She has no other occupations than that of looking after her youngsters and her husband.

Day after day she sends her elder sons, Vittorio, 15, and Bruno, 11, off to school with her encouragement and advice and watches over her younger son, Romano, 4, and her little daughter, Anna Maria, 2.

The Mussolinis' home, the Villa Torlonia, has spacious grounds, and the mother sees that her youngest children are often in the open. Romano and Anna Maria have a little electric automobile just large enough for the two of them to drive slowly around the gravel paths.

When school is over for Vittorio and Bruno, their mother encourages them to bring their schoolmates home with them to play in the gardens.

Often Signora Mussolini takes Romano or Anna Maria with her when she drives out to shop. Very infrequently, however she is seen publicly with her children Il Duce himself takes Vittorio and Bruno to the football games

Mussolini Children Husky

Rachele Mussolini looks carefully after the health of her children, and their vigorous constitution, inherited from two vigorous parents, does the rest. The youngest, Anna Maria, is so buxom and rosy that the family playfully calls her "Carnera," after the giant Italian prizefighter.

Il Duce's wife loves music both the Italian and the German opera, and introduces her children gradually to the meaning of music Occasionally they have the best of musicians at their home.

Rachele Mussolini really looks the part of a mother. Her kind, dark eyes, her frank matronly face, inspire confidence in others and love in her children She is 43 and though not thin she has not grown fat like many Italian mothers.

Her home district around Forli has a special name for the type of mother she represents "arzdora." This means a mother who gives up everything for her children

The children of Benito Mussolini are disciplined strictly by their teachers and others, for such is the Duce's express order.

Nor, when he sees them publicly, does Mussolini discriminate in his children's favor, requiring them to abide by the same discipline as that imposed on other Fascist youths.

No 'Swank' At School

The older boys, Vittorio, 15, and Bruno, 11, are sent to the Torquato Tasso high school, noted throughout Italy for the stiffness of its demands on the student. They go there each morning in an automobile driven by the Fascist militia officer Reatto.

The automobile does not stop before the school, however, lest the boys should be put on swank It halts in an adjacent street.

While their marks in school indicate that they are not "teacher's pets" they show that they are not lacking in intelligence.

Vittoria and Bruno look somewhat alike but are quite different in temperament.

Vittorio the elder, is serious and reserved like his father, has slightly better grades than his brother, shows particular aptitude for Italian and wants to follow in his father's footsteps as a newspaperman. He has founded a weekly periodical for Fascist youth.

Bruno is more vivacious and more ready to play and joke He is keenly interested in moving pictures Both brothers love sports

Mussolini's sons, Bruno (left) and Vittorio are being reared much as the average Italian youth in good circumstances comes up. That's the Fascist dictator's plan. Their mother, Signora Mussolini, is esteemed by neighbors as a mother who looks—and acts—the part. Here the boys are shown watching a fox hunt.
